Required materials. We will use the following textbooks throughout the course. Purchase or rent the correct edition, as older editions have a different chapter organization.
• David E. Shi and Holly A. Mayer, For the Record: A Documentary History of America, volume 2, 5th edition, W.W. Norton

Check what your book cover looks like. It’s a clue as to whether you have the correct edition. Your particular volumes and editions look like this:

Other assigned reading materials will be available on the internet or through our D2L course site.
Other purchases (optional): Headphones will help tremendously when you’re watching and listening to the course mini-lectures.

Prerequisites: None.

Course summary: HIST2112 examines the major themes of American history since 1877, the multicultural nature of contemporary U.S. civilization, and the U.S.’s role in the world.

HIST2112 has three major objectives that are established by the Department of History and Philosophy:

1. The student will be able to articulate facts about and assemble a chronology of major patterns and events in U.S. social, cultural, economic, and political history from 1877 to 1980.
2. The student will be able to identify significant persons and groups in connection to major events in U.S. history from 1877 to 1980.
3. The student will be able to connect and evaluate factors of causation and consequence to major events in U.S. history from 1877 to 1980.

Each week you’ll participate in a set of activities that help you achieve these objective. You’ll complete textbook readings, listen to brief lectures or audio programs, read “primary” historical documents, engage in discussion about primary documents and historical events, and completing practice quizzes. (There’s more information on the module activities further down in the syllabus.) We’ll formally assess your understanding in discussion and in three tests.

General Education at KSU: HIST 2112 satisfies one of Kennesaw State University’s general education program requirements, the US Perspectives learning outcome. The learning outcome states: Students identify the historical, political, social, or institutional developments of the United States. For more information about KSU’s General Education program requirements and associated learning outcomes, please visit http://catalog.kennesaw.edu/preview_program.php?catoid=10&poid=704

Delivery of the course: This is an online course delivered through Desire2Learn (D2L). You are required to check our D2L site and check your KSU email daily. You can find out more about D2L at https://web.kennesaw.edu/acs/pages/desire2learn/student-resources-d2l

Skills requirements: You must have basic computer skills to successfully engage with the material in this course. You must be able to:

- Open a browser and locate a specific website
- Download video tutorials to your computer and watch/listen to them. Work with the IT help desk if you have any trouble downloading and watching/listening to files.
Technology requirements: You are required have regular access to

- a high speed internet connection (otherwise you will not be able to hear/see the audio/video components)
- a web browser such as Firefox (with Java, Flash, RealPlayer and other components necessary for audio/video delivery)
- a PDF reader such as Adobe Acrobat

If you do not have access to this technology at home, I recommend that you use the university computer labs.

Technology challenges: If you have any problems with technology, including D2L, contact IT Services at http://uits.kennesaw.edu/students/ , 470-578-3555, or studenthelpdesk@kennesaw.edu

Communicating with me: I am easily accessible through regular email and D2L. I will make every attempt to respond to you within 24 hours (M-F). If I expect to be away from communication devices for an extended period of time, I will let you know beforehand. Utilize professional practices (e.g., correct grammar, fully and correctly spelled words) and adopt a professional tone in your communication.

If you would like to have a meeting on campus rather than by electronic means or phone, just let me know and we'll arrange a mutually convenient day and time.

Communicating with others: Utilize professional practices (e.g., correct grammar, fully and correctly spelled words) and adopt a professional tone when communicating with other students in the class on email, the discussion board, or elsewhere. Elsewhere in the “start here” module, you’ll see a document discussing netiquette. I expect you to adhere to those practices in email and the discussion board.

“Ack! I’m having trouble with this course!” If you are struggling with the material, activities, or major assignments in this course, contact me as soon as possible. I am glad to talk to you by Skype, chat, email, phone, or face-to-face.

HOW THE COURSE IS ORGANIZED

This course is organized into modules. Each module includes a number of different activities, such as a reading, an exercise, a practice quiz, participation on the discussion board, or a “real” test. You can find the modules on D2L.

Our module-weeks begin and end on Mondays at 8 a.m.

You should expect to spend about eight hours each week on this course. Some of you may want or need to commit more time to the course. Because of the discussion board requirements, you will have to interact with our D2L classroom during specified times during the module-week. Make sure you understand and can meet those requirements.

You may have experienced some online classes in which the instructors give you immediate access to all materials for the semester and allow you to work around your own schedule. This class is not organized in that way. I rarely post the modules more than one week in advance. This means you won't be able to work very far ahead in this course. I intentionally control the pace of this course so that the entire class will be reading and discussing the same material during the same week.

You are expected to complete all the week’s modules by the following Monday at 7:59 a.m., and I will frequently prevent participation in some course components after the due date/time has passed.

What to expect in each module:
Each module includes a number of different activities that you are required to complete, even if the activity does not have a grade directly associated with it.

Module wrap-ups. In each module, the very first activity will be a “wrap-up” of the previous week. The wrap-ups (which might be in text, audio, or video) will do a few different things, depending on the previous week’s work and discussion. In some cases I'll revisit major points from the material, in other cases I might draw on the class's discussion postings to expand on a particular topic. Additionally, if I feel like people misunderstood or didn't fully grasp something in the previous week’s material, I'll try to clarify the issue. I'll use these brief wrap-ups to tie material together and move us forward.

America readings: Readings from our textbook America: A Narrative History will provide you with a survey overview of the theme or era we’re discussing each week.

Mini-lectures: In some weeks, short audio/video lectures will augment the textbook readings. The lectures do not replace the textbook readings; rather, they provide more information on and delve deeper into particular topics. They do not survey or regurgitate the assigned reading and cannot be used as a replacement for the assigned reading.

Primary source readings: You’ll frequently be required to read historical documents from the period under study, what historians call “primary sources.” Analyzing primary sources helps you develop close reading and critical thinking skills. Additionally, studies have shown that primary source analysis encourages deeper historical understanding.

Discussion board postings: Each week you'll complete discussion board postings that ask you to do such things as: analyze the documents/film, place documents in conversation with each other, and/or place documents or the film in context. Most weeks, you’ll also respond to each other’s postings. By engaging in conversation with your colleagues on historical topics, you’ll deepen your learning, enhance and practice your communication skills, and better understand differing points of view. Read the discussion guide/rubric for more details about what constitutes substantive discussion. Be aware that questions about the discussion itself (not just the documents/films you’re analyzing!) will appear on the tests. At the suggestion of former HIST2112 students (“your evaluation comments at work!”), I’m requiring that students submit their initial discussion posts by Thursday, 8 p.m., of the module week, and that you post your comments to other students’ posts by Monday at 7:59 a.m. That means you will have to participate actively in class at two different times during the module-week. A discussion guide and grading rubric is posted separately in the Start Here module.

Practice quizzes: Practice quizzes allow you to test yourself on reading and lecture comprehension without penalty to your grade. The questions in the practice quizzes are similar to questions you’ll confront in your tests. You can take the practice quizzes as many times as you like, but you and I will be able to see the score of your first attempt in the gradebook. The “grade” won’t count for or against your final grade as such, but it lets me know that you’ve participated in this learning activity.

These activities deliver content and help you sort through and understand historical events. You are not graded on these activities as such but you are required to participate in this work and complete these activities. Thus, we have a participation policy:

Participation policy: You are required to be prepared for and participate in all online activities. Your final grade will be penalized up to 2 percentage (%) points for each module in which you fail to participate in activities in a substantive way. In other words, you start off the course with a 100% (A) for participation; it’s up to you to maintain your A!

I do not differentiate between excused and unexcused participation. If you know you will have to miss module activities for some reason (e.g., planned surgery), be aware that your final grade will be penalized according to the participation policy. If you alert me to scheduling issues ahead of time, I may be able to leave modules open for your participation or otherwise accommodate you.

I’ve posted a discussion and participation guide and grading rubric as a separate document in the Start Here module.

Graded Assessments:

Tests: Three tests covering lectures, the textbook, supplemental readings, discussions, movies, primary resource exercises, and any other material delivered will be given to assess content knowledge and understanding. The tests may include multiple choice, true/false, fill-in-the-blank, and/or essay questions. Tests may also include questions that ask you to place historical events in chronological order. You will be expected not simply to regurgitate information, but to use the information you've learned to, for example, analyze historical political cartoons or compare current events to events past. All tests and assignments are cumulative. That is, you are expected to retain and use all material delivered throughout the course.

The tests are open book, open note, open anything. However, you may not consult other people while taking the test.

The tests are timed. As such, if you have not prepared – that is, if you have not studied ahead of time -- you will not be able to complete the exam in the allotted time.

The tests will be completed online and are only available during the module week in which they are given. Test dates are shown in the D2L calendar and the calendar file on our D2L homepage. You cannot take tests after the module-week in which they are given and there are no make-up tests.

University Policies

Academic Honesty: No student shall receive, attempt to receive, knowingly give or attempt to give unauthorized assistance in the preparation of any work required to be submitted for credit (including examinations, laboratory reports, essays, themes, term papers, etc.). Unless specifically authorized, the presence and/or use of electronic devices during an examination, quiz, or other class assignment is considered cheating. When direct quotations are used, they should be indicated, and when the ideas, theories, data, figures, graphs, programs, electronic based information or illustrations of someone other than the student are incorporated into a paper or used in a project, they should be duly acknowledged. No student may submit the same, or substantially the same, paper or other assignment for credit in more than one class without the prior permission of the current professor(s). Cheating also includes instances of wholly or in part copying other students’ discussion posts or other work. Students are also prohibited from cutting and pasting (their own or others’) discussion postings into exams. Engaging in any behavior that a professor prohibits as academic misconduct in the syllabus or in class discussion is cheating.

All instances of academic dishonesty will result in an F in the course. I report all cases of academic misconduct to the Department of Student Conduct and Academic Integrity.

Academic Policies: Students are expected to comply with KSU's academic policies, listed here: https://web.kennesaw.edu/registrar/students/academic_policy.

Institutional Policies: Other KSU policies can be found at: http://registrar.kennesaw.edu/policies/

Student Support Services:

Academic Support Services: You have tutoring and academic support available to you at: http://learnonline.kennesaw.edu/resources/tutoring_academic_support.php

You have access to a variety of support services through the KSU office of Student Development: http://learnonline.kennesaw.edu/resources/student_support_resources.php

Learning Support Services: If you have a specific physical, psychiatric, or learning disability and require accommodations, please let me know early in the semester so that your learning needs may be appropriately met. You will need to provide documentation of your disability to the disAbled Student Support Services office, located in the Student Center room 267, and obtain a list of approved accommodations. More information is available at http://www.kennesaw.edu/stu_dev/dsss/dsss.html.
